

Your INL Update — Week of Jan. 24, 2011

This is Nicole Stricker with your INL Update.

It's awards season in Hollywood, but also at Idaho National Laboratory. The lab is celebrating leadership in science and technology with a black-tie event Friday. INL's annual Honors Banquet showcases achievements and contributions from INL scientists and technical staff.

Middle-school students and teachers will learn about engineering this week from INL and Boise State University employees. The annual engineering expo includes interactive sessions and hands-on activities led by Boise State students.

Shoshone-Bannock High School students will get to learn more about INL job opportunities at a Career Fair this week. INL recruiters will have a booth at the fair to provide internship information to high school students and career information to those seeking full-time employment at the lab.

This was your INL Update. You'll find more information at inl.gov, including community announcements and the latest INL news.
